DEFINITIONS

Retail Estimated Value

This is the price you see advertised on a car's windshield at the dealership. As such, it is the highest amount that the car could be sold for based on its make, model, and condition.

Trade Estimated Value

This value is determined by the average value that motor dealers and trading services would pay for a similar vehicle. The Trade Value is typically lower than Retail Value as motor dealers still need to add costs to get the vehicle in showroom condition and to advertise the vehicle and add a profit margin to this value.
